

TURNING THE TIDE: STORIES OF OPEN SCIENCE

What does it take to embrace openness in research?

'Turning the Tide: Stories of Open Science' is a short film born out of the Open Science Retreat in Schoorl, where researchers share their personal journeys toward more transparent and collaborative ways of working.

In this film, they reflect on the motivation and moments that inspired them to choose openness, sometimes feeling like they were going against the current. Yet, their stories reveal something powerful: a growing movement of peers who are not just resisting the tide, but creating a new wave together.

NOMINATIONS OPEN: LEO WAAIJERS OPEN SCIENCE AWARD

Starting from 2026, UKB and NWO will jointly present the annual Leo Waaijers Open Science Award. This award was established by UKB in 2024 to recognize individuals or teams who have made an exceptional contribution to open science. From 21 April 2026, you can nominate open science initiatives for this award.

Have you set up or come across an inspiring open science initiative that contributes to open, sustainable and accessible science? Then nominate this initiative now!

The winner will receive a prize fund of €50,000 to further reinforce existing initiatives, expand them, or launch new ones. Nominations must be submitted by 2:00 PM CEST on June 23, 2026.

RETHINKING PUBLICATION CULTURE

The Universiteiten van Nederland (UNL) have published a position paper, Vision on Publication Culture, opening a national discussion on how scholarly research is published and valued.

The paper sets out a shared direction beyond traditional publication models. It places stronger emphasis on openness and research integrity, and calls for broader recognition of research contributions. This should help move towards a more balanced and sustainable publication culture across Dutch academia.
