

OSCN RELAUNCH EVENT

On February 11th, OSCN was officially relaunched with a lively and thought provoking discussion - organized in collaboration with Radboud Reflects - on open education and public engagement. Key questions that were explored during this event were How open should science be? Who benefits, and what are the challenges in making research accessible to everyone? If you couldn't join us live (or wish to relive to the discussion ☺), you can now listen to a podcast episode of this event and gain valuable insights! Or you can read about the event.

FOLLOW OSCN ON LINKEDIN

OSCN now has its own social media account on LinkedIn. As communicated before, we selected this platform based on input from our community members. Through our social media account we can more easily (and more direct) share relevant content (posted by other local OSCs, for example) with our members, and with people outside of our local community. Also, it will be much easier to share your thoughts, and interact with each other. So be sure to follow us on LinkedIn. Scanning the QR code, will bring you directly to the OSCN account on LinkedIn.

COMMUNITY MEET-UP

It's time for another informal community meet-up at the Cultuurcafé, April 10th from 16h onwards. These meet-ups are a perfect opportunity to meet other community members, share your ideas for future activities, and/or even find collaborators for Open Science related projects you are passionate about. All members are welcome (feel free to bring a colleague), whether you followed OSCN from the start, or recently joined. Whether you are active in the field of Open Science, or just curious to learn. Even when time is limited, come by and say 'hi'. We are looking forward to meeting you.

NEWS FLASHES

- As we - the OSCN organization team - know very little about GitHub (and we are probably not alone in this), we would like to organize a GitHub related event. If you have any experience with GitHub, please email us (openscience.nijmegen@gmail.com). We are not looking for people to organize a full workshop, but community members that use (or used) GitHub and would like to share their experience in a few minutes.
- If you are interest in making your research, research support, or events more open, participatory, and inclusive (in the broadest sense of the word), you might want to check out this workshop (May 12, Nijmegen).
- In our October newsletter we wrote about the Open Science Festival and the Open Science Barcamp. This year both events will take place in Groningen on October 23 (Barcamp) and October 24 (Festival). You can already register for the Barcamp.
